

Bluetooth module is a small electronic device that can be connected to a computer or a mobile phone via Bluetooth technology. It is used to transfer data between devices without the need for cables. The module is typically a small circuit board with a USB connector and a Bluetooth antenna. It is used in various applications, including data transfer, file sharing, and remote control.

APP is a software application that can be installed on a mobile device. It is used to perform specific tasks, such as communication, data transfer, and control. The APP is typically a small program that can be downloaded from an app store or a website. It is used in various applications, including data transfer, file sharing, and remote control.

Bluetooth module

Scan to download the app

Apple download

Google
download

